The shell must be broken before the bird can fly.

~Jennifer Worth

Bah! Suffragettes. I've no time for suffragettes. They made the biggest mistake in history. They went for equality. They should have gone for power!

~Jennifer Worth

I've loved someone since I was seventeen but I can't have him and I can't give him up. So until I can do that no one else will stand a chance.

~Jennifer Worth

Love doesn't adhere to time and boundaries does it? It just is.

~Jennifer Worth

That's the trouble, I can't forget him. He was everything to me, except mine.

~Jennifer Worth

Faith is a private matter, usually held deep within a person, quiet, impossible to recognise or understand, if you have no faith yourself

~Jennifer Worth

Their devotion showed me there were no versions of love there was only... Love. That it had no equal and that it was worth searching for, even if that search took a lifetime.

~Jennifer Worth

I am forced to the conclusion that modern medicine does not know it all.

~Jennifer Worth

Quite honestly, a baby covered in blood, still slightly blue, eyes screwed up, in the first few minutes after birth, is not an object of beauty.

~Jennifer Worth

Sister Monica Joan murmured, as though to herself, but loud enough to be heard by all, "How perfectly charming. Old enough to know it all, and young enough to blush. Perfectly charming.
