If someone is killing, on a regular basis, thousands of animals, and if that person can only be stopped in one way by the use of violence, then it is certainly a morally justifiable solution.

~Jerry Vlasak

If (a particular researcher) won't stop when you ask nicely, when you picket in front of his house, or when you burn his car, maybe he'll stop when you hit him over the head with a two-by-four.

~Jerry Vlasak

If killing [animal research scientists] is the only way to stop them, then I said killing them would certainly be justified.

~Jerry Vlasak

I don't have any doubt in my mind that there will come a time when we will see violence against animal rights abusers.

~Jerry Vlasak

I think for five lives, 10 lives, 15 human lives, we could save a million, two million, 10 million non-human lives.

~Jerry Vlasak

If they won't stop when you ask them nicely, they don't stop when you demonstrate to them what they're doing is wrong, then they should be stopped using whatever means are necessary.

~Jerry Vlasak

Things are picking up...It's not going to make this thing go away... don't think you're going to find anybody deterred...There's a lot of people willing to die for the cause.

~Jerry Vlasak

Get arrested. Destroy the property of those who torture animals. Liberate those animals interned in the hellholes our society tolerates.

~Jerry Vlasak

Fear is an effective factor in altering behavior.

~Jerry Vlasak

You can justify, from a political standpoint, any type of violence you want to use.

~Jerry Vlasak

I think that violence and nonviolence are not moral principles, they're tactics.

~Jerry Vlasak

The inconvenience and the suffering of any children or any family members pales in comparison to the suffering and oppression that goes on in these animal laboratories.

~Jerry Vlasak

Whatever it takes to stop someone from abusing animals is certainly morally acceptable

~Jerry Vlasak

I am personally not advocating violence. I am simply saying that it is a morally acceptable tactic and it may be useful in the struggle for animal liberation. I don't know.

~Jerry Vlasak

If you had to hurt somebody or intimidate them or kill them, it would be morally justifiable.
