I shall omit former particulars, and begin with informing the Reader, that, in 1792, I was strangely visited, by day and night, concerning what was coming upon the whole earth.

~Joanna Southcott

I was now ordered to have my writings copied, and put into the printer's hand.

~Joanna Southcott

Another night, I dreamed I saw my father sweeping out the barn floor clean, and would not suffer the wheat to be brought in the barn. He appeared to me to be in anger.

~Joanna Southcott

In this manner, I continued with Satan for ten days. His answer and blasphemy were too shocking to pen; till I was worn out with rage and malice against him, I could not bear myself.

~Joanna Southcott

At the end of 1795 and beginning of 1796, I was ordered to write to the Church ministers.

~Joanna Southcott

The end of all things is at hand; that Satan's kingdom will be destroyed, and Satan chained down for a thousand years, and Christ's kingdom established upon earth.

~Joanna Southcott

My faith grew strong, and I sent a letter (as I was ordered) to the Rev. Dignitary of the Cathedral of Exeter. I was assured, before I sent it, he would not answer it.

~Joanna Southcott

In 1795, I sent him another letter, telling him, that danger still stood before us, and that the truth of what I had written in 1792 was to be proved by 12 men.

~Joanna Southcott

The next summer, 1794, corn grew dear, and distress began in our land.

~Joanna Southcott

I shall now proceed to my own experience, which hath truly convinced me, the Lord is awakened as one out of sleep; and the voice of the Lord will shake terribly the earth.

~Joanna Southcott

The first is last, and the last is first.

~Joanna Southcott

In 1792, my Sister told me, I was growing out of my senses.

~Joanna Southcott

I am the fool, and must be the sufferer, if it be not of God.

~Joanna Southcott

What you know not now you will know hereafter.
