A lot of Pacific island nations are sinking below sea level; they could easily transition slowly into becoming floating nations.

~Joe Quirk

You can't create the future unless you imagine it.

~Joe Quirk

Once you provide people with a platform to start their own country, every conceivable type of innovator reaches out to you with their own idea.

~Joe Quirk

Seasteading could be the means by which humanity will live sustainably.

~Joe Quirk

Seavilization will be better than civilization, and we have nearly half the world's surface to discover it.

~Joe Quirk

That's the marvellous thing about seasteads; if a government fails, there's nothing much the people who live there can do about it. But if seasteads fail, they simply disassemble and go away.

~Joe Quirk

We're going to draw a new map of the world, with French Polynesia as the centre of the Aquatic Age.
