As Pa said, censorship encouraged people to believe nonsense.

~John Christopher

We all have to learn to live with our losses, and to use our regrets to spur us on in the future.

~John Christopher

Morality, for all the conditioning to which the human mind has been and is subjected, is always a personal choice in the last analysis.

~John Christopher

There is always something to lose. But maybe more to gain.

~John Christopher

There are times when thinking about something is the worst possible policy.

~John Christopher

I think before I act---and then think again. I am not entirely a coward, but I do not lose myself in action as you do.

~John Christopher

His anger was as great as mine, but hot where mine was cold.

~John Christopher

Some people are oil and water.

~John Christopher

The secret of success in battle lies often not so much in the use of one's own strength but in the exploitation of the other side's weaknesses.

~John Christopher

What tricks the mind is what the mind is glad to be tricked by.

~John Christopher

And though I remember her name I cannot recall her face. All things pass.

~John Christopher

You would always beat me; not so much because you are a better fighter as because you will not accept defeat.

~John Christopher

We had been friends. We could not become strangers. It left only one thing: we must be enemies.

~John Christopher

It is because they are so strong that she hides her feelings.

~John Christopher

What men do matters more than what they know.

~John Christopher
