For in every adult there dwells the child that was, and in every child there lies the adult that will be.

~John Connolly

This world is full of broken things: broken hearts, broken promises, broken people.

~John Connolly

Here is a truth, a truth by which to live: there is hope. There is always hope. If we choose to abandon it, our souls will turn to ash and blow away.

~John Connolly

Being scared isn't the problem. It's not running away that's the hard part.

~John Connolly

â€žSarge, mr. Nurd here is threatening to turn me to jelly." "really?" said Sarge. "what flavor?"

~John Connolly

You can't prove that something doesn't exist. You can only prove that something does exist.

~John Connolly

They were on the side of the angels, even if the angels weren't entirely sure that this was a good thing.

~John Connolly

He had quite liked the dwarfs. He often had no idea what they were talking about, but for a group of homicidal, class-obsessed small people, they were really rather good fun.

~John Connolly

We are not meant to know the time or the nature of our deaths (for all of us secretly hope that we may be immortal).

~John Connolly

Each man dreams his own heaven.

~John Connolly

I'd been hurt, and in response I had acted violently, destroying a little of myself each time I did so.

~John Connolly

Why is there always one bloke in these boy bands who looks like he came to fix the boiler and somehow got bullied into joining the group?

~John Connolly

. . . For a lifetime was but a moment in that place, and each man dreams his own heaven. And in the darkness David closed his eyes, as all that was lost was found again.

~John Connolly

You had evil inside you, and you indulged it. Men will always indulge it.

~John Connolly

Luck ran out, but smart was for life.

~John Connolly

...it was imaginative people who tended to lie. Lying required making stuff up, and only imaginative people were good at that.

~John Connolly

He became merely the broken statue of a beast, now without another's fear to animate it.

~John Connolly

My feelings for Raphael are mine, and mine alone. I loved him, and that is all anyone needs to know. The rest is no business of any man's.

~John Connolly

She was plump, with dyed red hair and a face so caked with cosmetics that the floor of the Amazon jungle probably saw more natural light.

~John Connolly

"I'm a ghost," said the small figure, then added, a little uncertainly, "Boo?"

~John Connolly

I believe in those whom I love and trust.

~John Connolly

Once upon a time - for that is how all stories should begin - there was a boy who lost his mother.

~John Connolly

"You don't have much faith in people, do you?" said David. "I don't have much faith in anything," Roland replied. "Not even in myself."

~John Connolly

The US dollar is our currency but your problem.

~John Connolly

And David saw himself reflected in the Woodsman's eyes, and there he was no longer old but a young man, for a man is always his father's child no matter how old he is or how long they have been apart.

~John Connolly

It was an overcast late November morning, the grass splintered by hoarfrost, and winter grinning through the gaps in the clouds like a bad clown peering through the curtains before the show begins.
