Only Christ could have conceived Christ.

~Joseph Parker

Speak to the suffering, and you will never lack an audience. There is a broken heart in every crowd.

~Joseph Parker

Giving up on life is easier than going through the hard times to find the good.

~Joseph Parker

No true manhood can be trained by a merely intellectual process. You cannot train men by the intellect alone; you must train them by the heart.

~Joseph Parker

The truly religious man does everything as if everything depends on himself, and then leaves everything as if everything depended on God.

~Joseph Parker

Sin is a clenched fist and a blow in the face of God.

~Joseph Parker

When science advances religion goes along with it; science builds the altar at which religion prays.

~Joseph Parker

Never throw mud. You may miss the mark, and you'll have dirty hands.

~Joseph Parker

True preaching is the sweating of blood.

~Joseph Parker

The dew waits for no voice to call it to the sun.

~Joseph Parker

After reading the doctrines of Plato, Socrates or Aristotle, we feel the specific difference between their words and Christ's is the difference between an inquiry and a revelation.

~Joseph Parker

Goodness is a perpetual quantity, all penetrating, all searching, impartial, noble, a comfort in distress, a refuge to the weak, a tower and a defense to all who wish to be right and to do right.

~Joseph Parker
