I'm a night owl, and luckily my profession supports that. The best ideas come to me in the dead of night.

~Josh Fox

I think that the world is in the middle of a huge transition that we have to make to renewable energy. We have to transition away from fossil fuels very, very quickly.

~Josh Fox

The problem is that everywhere the gas drilling industry goes, a trail of water contamination, air pollution, health concerns and betrayal of basic American civic and community values follows.

~Josh Fox

Natural gas is a bridge fuel. But it's not a bridge - it's a gangplank. It's either a bridge in space or a bridge in time. The bridge in time we don't need. We have renewable technology right now.

~Josh Fox

When you're cornered, there are two things you can do: move or fight.

~Josh Fox

We are letting the extractive energy industries turn the world inside out.

~Josh Fox

I think 'Gasland' is the doorway for a lot of people to see something happening in their backyard and realize the national and global implications.

~Josh Fox

I think we're in an era of unprecedented dominance by corporations. I think people understand that deeply; I don't think that's even questioned.

~Josh Fox

We're not living in a society that science actually dominates the conversation. We're living in a situation where some science is allowed and a lot of it's about policy.

~Josh Fox

We should be moving vigorously towards renewable energy. The technology of which is right here right now.

~Josh Fox

When you live in a watershed area, in a pristine area, and you could watch this whole place fall apart in front of your eyes, you don't sell your soul for a buck.

~Josh Fox

I don't believe we're only motivated by our own self-interests. Often out of crisis comes this enormous wellspring of generosity and motivation.

~Josh Fox

What we've got is the wholesale embrace of fracking domestically, internationally and for export. And this couldn't be further from what we really need to do to address climate change.

~Josh Fox

When the natural gas industry was knocking on my door, they were knocking on the door of millions of people. And that became something that Americans really needed to focus on.

~Josh Fox

I really hate to be Debbie Downer right now, because everyone would love to say, "Yeah, we're finally doing something on climate!"

~Josh Fox

When your science runs into a policy roadblock, all of a sudden the science starts to disappear.
