I can really only can record at home.

~Julia Kent

I'm always anxious in introducing sounds that don't originate with the cello.

~Julia Kent

Last time I was recording, I was trying to loop on the computer, but it's really difficult because it's really different from looping on hardware.

~Julia Kent

I feel as though I can get an end result that works for me, but as far as recording techniques, I don't feel that confident in my abilities.

~Julia Kent

People tend to eat through the cello. They tend to take out the things that make it beautifully cello-y sometimes.

~Julia Kent

I saw Grizzly Man; I know what can happen.

~Julia Kent

I have totally like an urbanite relationship to nature. I mean I'm not someone who hikes.

~Julia Kent

I don't really understand the natural world, I admire it and am a little bit afraid of its power.

~Julia Kent

I feel like we as human beings are trampling all over the natural world, but at the same time, we are totally in its power.

~Julia Kent

I've been making the recordings for a long time, and I have tons and tons of them. I'm like a digital hoarder or something - everything is on like hard drives and whatever.

~Julia Kent

I'm really not working in a environment that's sonically pristine. It's not a conventional studio, obviously; it's a bit ramshackle.

~Julia Kent

When you're touring, it's somehow hard to focus on other things. I know other people can do it, but I really can't.

~Julia Kent

I find when I'm touring or when I'm traveling, I just enter this other world kind of. It's much easier for me to be creative and be unselfconscious about creating when I'm home.

~Julia Kent

Sometimes when I'm traveling, I feel a little bit dislocated, especially the transitions you make when you're traveling - you go to a different city every day.

~Julia Kent

I love traveling and I love seeing new places and meeting new people, but at the same time, it takes a certain amount of emotional strength to gel with that, at least for me.

~Julia Kent

I enjoy touring and traveling because that's the time when I get to read, and listen to music. You have all that downtime, which is great for that.

~Julia Kent

I'm really terrible at sort of figuring out the thing that's going to make the money, I guess.

~Julia Kent

It's just a spare room in my apartment. It's very cluttered and not particularly aesthetically inspiring, and it's very un-noise-proof.

~Julia Kent

As soon as we get out of our urban shell, we're still at the mercy of nature as individuals.
