Statistics is the grammar of science.

~Karl Pearson

That which is measured improves. That which is measured and reported improves exponentially.

~Karl Pearson

All great scientists have, in a certain sense, been great artists; the man with no imagination may collect facts, but he cannot make great discoveries.

~Karl Pearson

There is no short cut to truth, no way to gain a knowledge of the universe except through the gateway of scientific method.

~Karl Pearson

The unity of all science consists alone in its method, not in its material.

~Karl Pearson

Order and reason, beauty and benevolence, are characteristics and conceptions which we find solely associated with the mind of man.

~Karl Pearson

The mathematician, carried along on his flood of symbols, dealing apparently with purely formal truths, may still reach results of endless importance for our description of the physical universe.

~Karl Pearson

It is the old experience that a rude instrument in the hand of a master craftsman will achieve more than the finest tool wielded by the uninspired journeyman.

~Karl Pearson

The record of a month's roulette playing at Monte Carlo can afford us material for discussing the foundations of knowledge.
