To be one woman, truly, wholly, is to be all women. Tend one garden and you will birth worlds.

~Kate Braverman

Just being in a room with myself is almost more stimulation than I can bear.

~Kate Braverman

Whenever I get lost in a novel I just throw a poem in. What it does is flare up, and it's so illuminated that I'm able to see where to go. I write between these illuminations.

~Kate Braverman

I write a lot by sound. One sound leads me to another. These sounds aren't random; they have their own logic.

~Kate Braverman

In communist countries, you execute your poets. In the free world, the poets execute themselves.

~Kate Braverman

All good writing is built one good line at a time. You build a novel the same way you do a pyramid. One word, one stone at a time, underneath a full moon while the fingers bleed.

~Kate Braverman

Women have waited millions of years, growing separate as another species, with visions and priorities no man-words, no man-measurements can comprehend.

~Kate Braverman

If you can be anything else but a writer, be it.

~Kate Braverman

I have a great ability to improvise verbally and I am very funny on a dime.

~Kate Braverman

Women are defined by their biography, and men are sacrosanct from their biography.

~Kate Braverman

As a citizen of the post-historical variety, I am in continual mourning and prepared for worse.

~Kate Braverman

I knew a book of mine was finished when I was in intensive care.

~Kate Braverman

All my friends are artists, so I am used to collective agony as a mode.
