I love meeting new people; I think everyone has a story to tell. We should all listen sometimes.

~Kim Smith

A good edit process turns rocks into diamonds, and every author should love that part as much as the creative phase. I do love it. It's a different side to writing. It's like the fine-tuning.

~Kim Smith

Models are what they are... people who model clothing, that's all.

~Kim Smith

Pickup lines are a major turn-off, they don't work on me and I tune them out. It's better to just be honest.

~Kim Smith

I do love wearing heels but my feet can't be in them all day long. I want to have fun and dance so I need to be comfortable.

~Kim Smith

I hope that in 5 years from now I'll be working and doing what makes me happy. Whatever that may be.

~Kim Smith

I'm still reading some scripts and I model as well, so I'm still doing that. But I don't want to do like just anything so we're being really selective about the stuff I'll do.

~Kim Smith

My greatest achievement so far is that I've been able to continue with my normal life. I love what I do, but more so, I'm glad to have people who care about me close by.

~Kim Smith

I think in most sports sometimes you need a little luck for the ball or calls to roll your way.

~Kim Smith

The editing process is a necessary evil. I can write until the cows come home but it is all garbage until it gets edited.

~Kim Smith

My experiences always influence my writing, but usually only on an emotional level. I have experienced death of a family member and it's easy to dredge up those feelings and get them on the page.

~Kim Smith

For me, setting and description is a challenge. I always want to get that part just right, and sometimes the words won't work.

~Kim Smith

The best part of being a pro is being able to travel around the world. I have met so many incredible people and experienced different cultures all through sport.

~Kim Smith

There are days when I don't want to go to the gym or find myself not super motivated upon arriving. I would visualize myself playing at the Olympics.
