It is comparing apples and oranges to refer to the love that the Savior expressed for all mankind, for every person, for every man and woman and child, with the doctrine related to marriage.

~Lance B. Wickman

Marriage is not an institution to be tampered with by mankind, and certainly not to be tampered with by those who are doing so simply for their own purposes.

~Lance B. Wickman

There is no such thing in the Lord's eyes as something called same-gender marriage.

~Lance B. Wickman

The more a person can look beyond gender orientation, the happier and more fulfilling life is likely to be.

~Lance B. Wickman

What happens in somebody's house down the street does in very deed have an effect on what happens in my house and how it's treated.

~Lance B. Wickman

Children deserve to be reared in a home with a father and a mother.

~Lance B. Wickman

I certainly discourage people getting involved with any group or organization that foster living a homosexual lifestyle.

~Lance B. Wickman

There's no denial that one's gender orientation is certainly a core characteristic of any person, but it's not the only one.

~Lance B. Wickman

In this life, such things as service in the Church, including missionary service, all of this is available to anyone who is true to covenants and commandments.

~Lance B. Wickman

Why somebody has a same-gender attraction... who can say? But what matters is the fact that we know we can control how we behave, and it is behavior which is important.

~Lance B. Wickman

What matters most is recognition that 'I have my own will. I have my own agency. I have the power within myself to control what I do.'

~Lance B. Wickman

Any opportunity to serve in the Church is a blessing.

~Lance B. Wickman

Homosexual behavior is and will always remain before the Lord an abominable sin. Calling it something else by virtue of some political definition does not change that reality.
