~Larry Page

I have a simple algorithm, which is, wherever you see paid researchers instead of grad students, that's not where you want to be doing research.

~Larry Page

You can try to control people, or you can try to have a system that represents reality. I find that knowing what's really happening is more important than trying to control people.

~Larry Page

Find the leverage in the world so you can be truly lazy.

~Larry Page

One of our big goals in search is to make search that really understands exactly what you want, understands everything in the world. As computer scientists, we call that artificial intelligence.

~Larry Page

If we were motivated by money, we would have sold the company a long time ago and ended up on a beach.

~Larry Page

We really care about our brand. We really want it to stand for high quality. We want people to be excited about it, for it to be fun.

~Larry Page

Almost everyone who has had an idea that's somewhat revolutionary or wildly successful was first told they're insane.

~Larry Page

You're probably on the right track if you feel like a sidewalk worm during a rainstorm.

~Larry Page

You have to combine both things: invention and innovation focus, plus the company that can commercialize things and get them to people.

~Larry Page

If we are not trusted, we have no business.

~Larry Page

Our goal is long-term growth in revenue and absolute profit - so we invest aggressively in future innovation while tightly managing our short-term costs.

~Larry Page

Basically, our goal is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful.

~Larry Page

You don't need to have a 100-person company to develop that idea.

~Larry Page

Many leaders of big organizations, I think, don't believe that change is possible. But if you look at history, things do change, and if your business is static, you're likely to have issues.
