The people in the popular group say there is no peer pressure because they are at the top of the food chain. Really what they are doing is just eating away at everybody else.

~Lauren Greenfield

All my film ideas and subjects have come from photography.

~Lauren Greenfield

What I'm documenting can be hard to distill, because it's all around us like the air we breathe. I often need to go to a place where I can capture extreme moments.

~Lauren Greenfield

I've been a documentary photographer for much longer than I have been a filmmaker.

~Lauren Greenfield

My photography is often a sociological look at American culture and it's been very well published in the UK.

~Lauren Greenfield

I focus on a lot of women's issues.

~Lauren Greenfield

When I first moved from photography to filmmaking, I was worried about how big I had to become. I was one person, or maybe me and an assistant, and I had these small cameras, and maybe a flash.
