Every man or woman is a potential poet or artist. Everyone has the capacity to bring to their work the dignity, purposefulness, and presence of the artist.

~Laurence Boldt

Without self-expression, life lacks spontaneity and joy. Without service to others, it lacks meaning and purpose.

~Laurence Boldt

Your life's work is something you love to do, something your talents can find full expression through. If we enjoy our work, we are sure to bring our creativity and enthusiasm to it.

~Laurence Boldt

To the extent that your work takes into account the needs of the world, it will be meaningful; to the extent that through it you express your unique talents, it will be joyful.

~Laurence Boldt

The artist accepts the limitations of form, not with fear and dread, but as the starting point of creation.

~Laurence Boldt

be present, be concentrated, and be strong.

~Laurence Boldt

Good intentions are not enough; commitment and sacrifice are necessary.

~Laurence Boldt

The hero, in living her own life, in being true to herself; radiates a light by which others may see their own way.

~Laurence Boldt

In life's work, bliss and sacrifice are two sides of the same coin, complementary opposites.

~Laurence Boldt

I am happy that I am a unique individual, endowed with unique talents and abilities. I never spend my precious time and energy comparing my talents with those of others.
