Sometimes facing opportunity is like staring at the knees of a giraffe.

~Laurie Beth Jones

Nobody wins until we all do.

~Laurie Beth Jones

Leaders identify, articulate, and summarize concepts that motivate others. Most important, they boil concepts down to an understandable idea.

~Laurie Beth Jones

To have no vision of your own means living the vision of someone else.

~Laurie Beth Jones

Perhaps the true mark of a leader is that she or he is willing to stand alone.

~Laurie Beth Jones

Forgetting your mission leads, inevitably, to getting tangled up in details-details that can take you completely off your path.

~Laurie Beth Jones

A wise person does not fear the edges and fringes, but studies them. Indeed, he or she is often in them, working to make change happen.

~Laurie Beth Jones

It takes people some time to appreciate that their greater resources are often the people they know.

~Laurie Beth Jones

My father was always there for me when I lost. But, then, I never really lost when my father was there.

~Laurie Beth Jones

If someone was to tally the number of human hours wasted in business by people trying to accomplish objectives without being given the authority to do so, we would all be appalled.

~Laurie Beth Jones

As a leader, it is vitally important that you keep in touch with your boss on a regular, sacrosanct basis. Chances are your boss can provide an aerial view that will make your path more clear.

~Laurie Beth Jones

People who succeed speak well of themselves to themselves.

~Laurie Beth Jones

Ken & Mark weave a simple, compelling tale that contains profound truths. If only we all knew The Secret.

~Laurie Beth Jones

Know more about the situation you're facing than a reporter who is writing a major article would.

~Laurie Beth Jones

Inertia, when first encountered, appears to be an immovable force. We are creatures who like comfort, patterns, and repetition... Yet change is life's only constant.
