I find it interesting that many of the people who want to restrict fossil fuels live in well-developed countries where abundant and affordable energy is readily available.

~Lee R. Raymond

There is hardly an activity that a person can think about that does not intrinsically involve energy, most of which is currently provided by fossil fuels.

~Lee R. Raymond

Ethical conduct is something that becomes inherent in an organization over a long period of time.

~Lee R. Raymond

It is important to remember that all business has an impact on the lives of real people.

~Lee R. Raymond

The market system requires that people be committed and willing to work hard. Inherent with that is what I call a merit system, which I think gives people the greatest opportunity.

~Lee R. Raymond

The freedoms that people have that flow from all civic institutions fundamentally come from the success of a market system.

~Lee R. Raymond

We should seek a system that provides outlets for those skills and talents so that everyone can find a way to work and serve in a manner that best suits the strengths of each individual.

~Lee R. Raymond

It makes no sense to talk of the social obligations of the corporation without reference to its economic obligations. The two are intertwined.

~Lee R. Raymond

Without competition, the spectacular development of technology that we have seen in the last one hundred years in this country would not have happened.

~Lee R. Raymond

In some of the countries where we operate, there is a tradition of corruption, in which the political elites work with business in the framework of unsavory relationships.

~Lee R. Raymond

I have a great deal of difficulty with those who live in a hugely prosperous country telling people in the developing world that they should be deprived of a critical source of energy.

~Lee R. Raymond

There is no system that is inherently moral if the participants themselves are not.

~Lee R. Raymond

The main professional responsibility of a person in business is business.
