And at that moment, a lilting melody lifts to the moon as a single sparrow sings.

~Lisa Ann Sandell

The birch trees loom ahead like a brotherhood of ghosts.

~Lisa Ann Sandell

Still, I look down, and the grass is so green, I cannot understand how it does not wither and die with sorrow. ~Song of the Sparrow

~Lisa Ann Sandell

What place does a woman have here, in the realm of men?

~Lisa Ann Sandell

The song is languid and speaks of love and loneliness and loss. Why does love seem to go with the sad things?

~Lisa Ann Sandell

Love is a tempestuous mistress. And none of us shall ever master her.

~Lisa Ann Sandell

My sparrow, she flickers and wakes and sings and sings.

~Lisa Ann Sandell

Merry Christmas, I whisper to myself. Merry Christmas, Nate.
