Like a four-sided porch I'm open to all winds.

~Luc Sante

I've always assumed it to be an absolute requirement for being a writer: to find all emotions and the sources of all behaviors somewhere within yourself.

~Luc Sante

Redheaded Peckerwood, which unerringly walks the fine line between fiction and nonfiction, is a disturbingly beautiful narrative about unfathomable violence and its place on the land

~Luc Sante

Subjectivity is my middle name, a trick memory is my pack mule, and self-contradiction is my trusty old jackknife.

~Luc Sante

When I was a child I did engage in an arduous struggle to pass: learning English, getting rid of my accent, becoming conversant with the culture in all its large and small aspects.

~Luc Sante

I always give money to a sidewalk con if the story is a good one, even if I don't believe a word of it. Art deserves to get paid.

~Luc Sante

Unlike a bow and arrow, a camera by its nature ensures that some kind of target will always be hit, if not necessarily the intended target nor in the intended way.

~Luc Sante

New York has no truck with the past. It expels its dead.

~Luc Sante

I realize that books are not the entire world, even if they sometimes seem to contain it. But I need the stupid things.

~Luc Sante

I realised that although I was fascinated with America, its history and culture, I was not interested in becoming American.

~Luc Sante

I try to take pictures on their own terms, considering the historical and social context from which they emerge.
