When you can stop you don't want to, and when you want to stop, you can't.

~Luke Davies

It's not that photography recaptures the world you have been in; more that it creates a new one: photographs are like Post-It Notes reminding us of the deep architectonic forms of space and thought.

~Luke Davies

And I come to realise that all my small todays, the way I act, will lead into my tomorrows.

~Luke Davies

The very concept of solid ground is a myth. The galaxy itself is adrift.

~Luke Davies

Some people are attracted to sickness, to the kind of madness where sparks fly off the head, to the incoherence of despair, masked by nervous energy, which winds up looking like bewildered joy.

~Luke Davies

Love could be fractured and serve different purposes, and that intense love could be divided, between people just as easily as between moments of time.

~Luke Davies

If time stood still, and we could choose the time, the best time, then love without pain would be all I know.

~Luke Davies

Drought brings out the worst in us and it's easy to hate your fellow human beings.

~Luke Davies

You're beautiful, but you're somewhere else. That's okay. I can handle that. But we won't continue as friends, not just now. I like you as a lover, not a friend.

~Luke Davies

Imperceptibly, more time passes when I'm not remembering our every moment together, not recreating our every conversation, re-imagining our love-making. It is immeasurably sad.

~Luke Davies

Comfort is beauty muted by heroin. Sadness is beauty drained by lack of it.

~Luke Davies

Everything comes to nothing in the end, I suppose. Or at least, nothing happens exactly the way we imagine it.

~Luke Davies

When you think you are in love, you don't want to know about the things that could end it.

~Luke Davies

In the presence of their love I sensed my loneliness, and I understood for a moment, clearly, that deep and basic human desire for companionship at depth.

~Luke Davies

The wonder to me is not that she made it through at all but that she made it through so relatively intact, so vibrant. So free of bitterness and so empty of resentment.
