If you sit on, sleep on, stare at, or touch something for more than an hour a day, spend whatever it takes to get the best.

~Marco Arment

Microsoft loves losing money with online services, so this should stay free forever... unless they get a new CEO who isn't crazy about pouring billions into a hole.

~Marco Arment

Attention to detail can't be (and never is) added later. It's an entire development philosophy, methodology, and culture.

~Marco Arment

Google won't break into your home. You'll invite them in.

~Marco Arment

Keep building and supporting new tools, technologies, and platforms to empower independence, interoperability, and web property ownership.

~Marco Arment

People have different interpretations of "urgent".

~Marco Arment

Making a product better often requires removing features.

~Marco Arment

Programmers work in bursts of productivity. Then, they let the brain rest and get back into it. A lot about the office world is not a great fit for me.

~Marco Arment

Charge for something and make more than you spend.

~Marco Arment

Emphasizing and rewarding length over quality results in worse writing and more reader abandonment.

~Marco Arment

People will pay for something they like because they want to ensure its future.

~Marco Arment

I don't even like being quoted in a press release.

~Marco Arment

With a Web and iPhone app, I try to find new and tiny ways to delight my customers. They may not notice, but it helps drive goodwill and makes your product remarkable.

~Marco Arment

One reason I love the Kindle, more so than the iPad, is that on the Kindle you can't do anything else but read. It's the best, because it does the least. It doesn't even show a clock.

~Marco Arment

Instapaper is much bigger today than I could have predicted in 2008, and it has simply grown far beyond what one person can do. To really shine, it needs a full-time staff of at least a few people.

~Marco Arment

Instapaper wouldn't be of as much value if it weren't for these mobile and e-reader devices. They give you a separate physical context for reading.

~Marco Arment

With Betaworks' drive and resources now behind it, I'm confident that Instapaper has a very bright future. I'm looking forward to seeing what they can do.

~Marco Arment

I've worked with many large and small publishers, and nearly all of them love the value that Instapaper provides to their readers.

~Marco Arment

With Instapaper, I can take a few months off. I can't stop publishing 'The Magazine' for two months and work on something else.
