Online petitions are built around getting as many signatures as possible. But the experience of taking them and forgetting about them degrades the importance.

~Margaret D. Klein

I used to be a lot more afraid of climate change. Now I spend my time working, planning, trying to move forward.

~Margaret D. Klein

Taking fear seriously is not easy. A lot of people's response to fear is "Don't worry so much, it's crazy." But some things absolutely deserve our fear, and climate change is first among them.

~Margaret D. Klein

Psychologically speaking, the rational, healthy response to climate change is to say to oneself, "What can I do about this?" But that question is often answered through individual action.

~Margaret D. Klein

While the American people have the impression that scientists are hard at work figuring out this complex matter of climate change, it's not actually that complicated.

~Margaret D. Klein

There are a lot of reasons people don't talk about climate change. One of them has to do with the language of science, and people feeling not competent about this issue.

~Margaret D. Klein

Climate change has been associated so much with a peaceful mentality - obviously peace and love are good, but we need to think about climate as a threat to survival.

~Margaret D. Klein

By looking the other way on climate change we facilitate a collective denial, and we do it for each other.

~Margaret D. Klein
