The strong look for more strength, the weak for excuses.

~Margaret George

I had a desire to see something besides my own shores, if only to be content to return to them someday. If I wish to live in my native land and love her, it should not be out of ignorance.

~Margaret George

Kindness is stronger than iron bars.

~Margaret George

Boredom is that awful state of inaction when the very medicine - that is, activity - which could solve it, is seen as odious.

~Margaret George

The cure for a broken heart is simple, my lady. A hot bath and a good night's sleep.

~Margaret George

Thus we use our supposed "knowledge" of others to speak on their behalf, and condemn them for their words we ourselves put in their silent mouths.

~Margaret George

Yet we always envy others, comparing our shadows to their sunlit sides.

~Margaret George

Things do not happen, we must make them happen

~Margaret George

The most wicked criminals have God on their lips at all times, for God is the only one who can stomach them.

~Margaret George

I was ever the realist, sometimes to my sorrow. But seldom to my regret.

~Margaret George

Perhaps life is like an hour glass, with dear ones the sand that slips from the upper glass--the earth--into the second--eternity.

~Margaret George

To love someone is to catch your breath whenever he walks in the room.

~Margaret George

In my experience, there are two things that no one will admit to: having no sense of humor and being susceptible to flattery.

~Margaret George

So I learned two things that night, and the next day, from him: the perfection of a moment, and the fleeting nature of it.

~Margaret George

When he comes into a room, you give a little gasp, deep inside, far inside,' someone once said when trying to describe what it meant to love.

~Margaret George

Hope is a straw hat hanging beside a window covered with frost.

~Margaret George

We are always tortured by our memory of the last time we were with anyone, what we said, what we did not say.

~Margaret George

What is one person's diversion may be another's supreme test.

~Margaret George
