... the self respect of individuals ought to make them demand of their leaders conformity with an agreed-upon code of ethics and moral conduct.

~Mary Barnett Gilson

The higher one climbs, the lonelier one is.

~Mary Barnett Gilson

Until the sky is the limit [for women], as it is for men, men as well as women will suffer, because all society is affected when half of it is denied equal opportunity for full development.

~Mary Barnett Gilson

One of the baffling things about life is that the purposes of institutions may be ideal, while their administration, dependent upon the faults and weaknesses of human beings, may be bad.

~Mary Barnett Gilson

Men's minds must be free, and that means the minds of all, not the minds of a select few.

~Mary Barnett Gilson

To find ways of practicing democracy, not ways of orating about it, is our great problem.

~Mary Barnett Gilson

... until opportunity is as free from sex discrimination as the right to vote finally came to be, no man has any right to criticize women for failure to measure up to men.

~Mary Barnett Gilson

The intelligent employer encourages challenge, questioning--not blind acceptance and "our Leader knows best" acclaim.

~Mary Barnett Gilson

... a worker was seldom so much annoyed by what he got as by what he got in relation to his fellow workers.

~Mary Barnett Gilson

... every experience in life enriches one's background and should teach valuable lessons.
