Saddle your dreams before you ride em.

~Mary Webb

If you stop to be kind, you must swerve often from your path.

~Mary Webb

Green is the fresh emblem of well founded hopes. In blue the spirit can wander, but in green it can rest.

~Mary Webb

Nature's music is never over; her silences are pauses, not conclusions.

~Mary Webb

The well of Providence is deep. It's the buckets we bring to it that are small.

~Mary Webb

The past is only the present become invisible and mute; and because it is invisible and mute, its memorized glances and its murmurs are infinitely precious. We are tomorrow's past.

~Mary Webb

For the more a soul conforms to the sanity of others, the more does it become insane.

~Mary Webb

Autumn is full of leave-taking. In September the swallows are chattering of destination and departure like a crowd of tourists.

~Mary Webb

Give me good digestion, Lord, And also something to digest; but where and how that something comes I leave to Thee, who knoweth best.

~Mary Webb

It's the folks that depend on us for this and for the other that we most do miss.

~Mary Webb

If you know much about your work - why you work, how you work, your aims - you are probably not a poet.

~Mary Webb

Fragrance is the voice of inanimate things.

~Mary Webb

The more anybody wants a thing, the more they do think others want it.

~Mary Webb

We are tomorrow's past.

~Mary Webb

She had for so many years been trying to be like other people, that she was now like nothing in heaven or earth.

~Mary Webb

it is the way of lovers to think that none can bless or succour their love but their own selves. And there is a touch of truth in it, maybe more than a touch.

~Mary Webb

But when you dwell in a house you dislike, you will look out of a window a deal more than those that are content with their dwelling.

~Mary Webb

Autumn is full of leave-taking.

~Mary Webb

It made me gladsome to be getting some education, it being like a big window opening.
