Love is an active construction, and choice, not just an encounter that happens by chance.

~Masha Tupitsyn

True lovers are as rare as true rebels.

~Masha Tupitsyn

I am as much what I am because of what I still don't have as I am because of what I have had and what I might still have one day.

~Masha Tupitsyn

Quotes are like prompts. A way of searching, connecting the dots.

~Masha Tupitsyn

Quotes are a way of acting out not just a text, and not just thinking, but the making of a text. The construction of thinking.

~Masha Tupitsyn

Thinking through quotes, which to say scouring a range of texts for insight, is one way to outline the process of thinking/feeling through a subject.

~Masha Tupitsyn

The digital age is for me in many ways about temporal wounding. It's really messed up our ontological clocks.

~Masha Tupitsyn

One of the liberating things about having a blog is the total vision it allows.

~Masha Tupitsyn

Love has been the ontological pattern for me. And also the withholding pattern.

~Masha Tupitsyn

At any moment I could give up, but I haven't because love for me is an indispensable structure for being.

~Masha Tupitsyn

I'm a discursive thinker, so quotation has played an active role in the structure and content of my books from the beginning.

~Masha Tupitsyn

In the digital economy, everything is archived, catalogued, readily available, and yet nothing really endures.

~Masha Tupitsyn

The digital artwork is characterized not by the technology which delivers it, but by the "passage" itself.
