Everyone is a comedy. If people are laughing at you, they just don't quite understand the joke that is themselves.

~Matt Haig

Make sure, as often as possible, you are doing something you'd be happy to die doing.

~Matt Haig

Advice for a human 86. To like something is to insult it. Love it or hate it. Be passionate. As civilisation advances, so does indifference. It is a disease. Immunize yourself with art. And love.

~Matt Haig

You reach a certain age -- sometimes it's fifteen, sometimes it's forty-six -- and you realize the cliché you have adopted for yourself isn't working.

~Matt Haig

This was, I would later realise, a planet of things wrapped inside things. Food inside wrappers. Bodies inside clothes. Contempt inside smiles. Everything was hidden away.

~Matt Haig

Obey your head. Obey your heart. Obey your gut. In fact, obey everything except commands.

~Matt Haig

Flowers, after love, must have been the best advert planet Earth had going for it.

~Matt Haig

Laughter, along with madness, seemed to be the only way out, the emergency exit for humans.

~Matt Haig

Vampire? Such a provocative word, wrapped in too many clichés and girly novels.

~Matt Haig

Dark matter is needed to hold galaxies together. Your mind is a Galaxy. More dark than light. But the light makes it worthwhile.

~Matt Haig

All that humans create serves solely to lessen the terror of existence.

~Matt Haig

The single biggest act of bravery or madness anyone can do is the act of change.

~Matt Haig

Kissing is what humans do when words have reached a place they can't escape from.

~Matt Haig

If getting drunk was how people forgot they were mortal, then hangovers were how they remembered.

~Matt Haig

And how could I believe that Australian wine was automatically inferior to wine sourced from other regions on the planet when I had never drunk anything but liquid nitrogen?

~Matt Haig

There is only one genre in fiction, the genre is called book.

~Matt Haig

If you think something is ugly, look harder. Ugliness is just a failure of seeing.

~Matt Haig

Beauty breeds beauty, truth triggers truth. The cure for writer's block is therefore to read.

~Matt Haig

Knowledge is finite. Wonder is infinite.

~Matt Haig

The possibility of pain is where love stems from

~Matt Haig

Blood doesn't satisfy cravings. It magnifies them.

~Matt Haig

End-users not technologies shape the market. Consequently marketers need to stay abreast not only of technological developments but also of the way people respond to them.
