I came to accept in myself a long time ago that I really do like writing articulate sociopaths.

~Matt Nix

The funny thing for me is, I have never lived in a network world.

~Matt Nix

I have always been drawn to characters, and this was true for my feature-writing career as well, where there is a tension between rule-breaking and rule-following.

~Matt Nix

I'm a rule follower. But there is also a part of me, clearly, that doesn't follow them.

~Matt Nix

Everybody should have a television show. Let's all get television shows!

~Matt Nix

I'm fortunate to have had my own level of success. My joys in life are I've got three little kids, and I got to buy a house that I really like, and everyone should have that.

~Matt Nix

I am very conscious on a daily basis of how extraordinarily blessed I am to get to do what I do and work with the people that I work with, so I make a practice of being grateful.

~Matt Nix

I am fortunate in that I am motivated to do what I do by just a really goofy desire to do it. Maybe I have demons that are hidden away someplace, and I'll discover mine someday.

~Matt Nix

Spies have the same kinds of needs and desires that everybody does, which is funny. The best kind of comedy derives from that kind of truth.

~Matt Nix

Obviously, everybody's favorite form of web content is more story with principal actors. But the economics of the web do not yet support.

~Matt Nix

People joke about me that I talk in voiceovers. I have that sort of inflection. But I do talk in voiceovers. I have done it my whole life.

~Matt Nix

The idea of the writer/producer in television is much younger than people think it is.

~Matt Nix

I have to say, as a showrunner, being niche-y is kind of a great thing.

~Matt Nix

One of the things that I have always been interested in is the actual experience of people in their lives as opposed to what we think their experience should be.
