How to get a seat at the table: 1. Be excellent. 2. Say a prayer. 3. Be available 4. Be you

~Megan Alexander

I feel very lucky to have served under some great bosses. The majority of them were men, but I have also had a few women. In many ways, I feel like media is pretty neutral when it comes to gender.

~Megan Alexander

Author Brene Brown - her books inspire me to "dare greatly".

~Megan Alexander

Michelle Tafoya - best NFL sideline reporter - period. She is always prepared and professional.

~Megan Alexander

I have had bosses that were genuinely excited when I told them I was pregnant. I feel very blessed, but I also know I need to continue to do excellent work and stay organized.

~Megan Alexander

If anything, people think it's cool that I'm still working. I'm proud to be a working mama in this world.

~Megan Alexander

My work speaks for itself.

~Megan Alexander

I salute all workingwomen everywhere! You inspire me to keep going!

~Megan Alexander

I am sent on assignments just like guys. I have covered presidential campaigns, natural disasters, tragedies, red carpets, medical stories and more.

~Megan Alexander

I want to be known for good work first. A good story and good delivery is just that - period.

~Megan Alexander

Robin Roberts - what a trailblazer she has been in sports TV! One of the best in TV.

~Megan Alexander

I do respect the political process and those that cover politics on a regular basis. It's just not for me.

~Megan Alexander

As a major country music fan, the CMA awards are my favorite!

~Megan Alexander

Politics is quite draining. There are so many heated discussions and press conferences to cover during a convention.

~Megan Alexander

MTV Awards are fun - it's MTV! You never know what's going to happen. It's a slice of pop culture in the moment, and you can't take it too seriously.
