The Falcon and the Dove sit there together, And th 'one of them doth prune the others feather.

~Michael Drayton

With much we surfeit; plenty makes us poor.

~Michael Drayton

It is your virtue, being men, to try; And it is ours, by virtue to deny.

~Michael Drayton

Better sit still, than rise to meet the devil.

~Michael Drayton

All transitory titles I detest; a virtuous life I mean to boast alone. Our birth's our sires'; our virtues be our own.

~Michael Drayton

When faith is kneeling by his bed of death, And innocence is closing up his eyes, Now if thou would'st, when all have given him over, From death to life, thou might'st him yet recover

~Michael Drayton

Thus when we fondly flatter our desires, Our best conceits do prove the greatest liars.

~Michael Drayton

Since there's no help, come let us kiss and part.

~Michael Drayton

So in all humours sportively I range; My muse is rightly of the English strain, That cannot long one fashion entertain.

~Michael Drayton

When Time shall turn those amber locks to grey, My verse again shall gild and make them gay.

~Michael Drayton

Care draws on care, woe comforts woe again, Sorrow breeds sorrow, on grief brings forth twain.

~Michael Drayton

When Time shall turne those Amber Lockes to Gray.

~Michael Drayton

The mind is free, whate'er afflict the man, A King's a King, do Fortune what she can.
