And don't tell me the end justifies the means because it doesn't. We never reach the end. All we ever get is means. That's what we live with.

~Nick Harkaway

That's what you get for ignoring the beauty of Tupperware.

~Nick Harkaway

I have known heaven, and now I am in hell, and there are mimes.

~Nick Harkaway

Ninjas are silly. They are the flower fairies of gong fu and karate.

~Nick Harkaway

The tree of nonsense is watered with error, and from its branches swing the pumpkins of disaster.

~Nick Harkaway

Photography is without mercy--though it's nonsense to say it does not lie. Rather, it lies in a particular, capricious way which makes beggars of ministers and gods of cat's meat men.

~Nick Harkaway

We need to create the institutions that will support the society we want to live in. The only answer is collective action.

~Nick Harkaway

I love you forever. I am sorry I cannot love you now.

~Nick Harkaway

Children, bored and opinionated, are scholars of the most dogmatic stripe.

~Nick Harkaway

If we one day cease to exist, what will be remarkable is that we were ever here at all.

~Nick Harkaway

The Brit abroad is always the voice of caution. Persons of other cultures are known to be undisciplined, prone to leaning out of car windows and cooking with garlic.

~Nick Harkaway

We should be worrying about if you live in the city you're more likely to have anxiety or mood disorders and to be schizophrenic. More than the problems people have from social media.

~Nick Harkaway

I have wrangles with Facebook, entered fictitious trips because I can't get the map to get off my page, don't want people to know where I live. It is possible to carve out a space that's your own.

~Nick Harkaway

Law is error, you see. It's an attempt to write down a lot of things everyone ought to know anyway.

~Nick Harkaway

Society is based on discontent: people wanting more and more and more, being continually dissatisfied with their homes, their bodies, their decor, their clothes, everything.

~Nick Harkaway

Google says young people don't care about privacy, but when asked if they'd let their parents see their phone bills and other stuff they say no.

~Nick Harkaway

Nowhere have I ever heard of Satan taking the form of an avuncular hippie. No doubt he could. It just seems inefficient.

~Nick Harkaway

In a lot of places, of course, the '80s had never really come to an end.

~Nick Harkaway

The trouble with shooting people, Edie Banister now remembers, is that it's so hard to do just one.

~Nick Harkaway

It's not that any sufficiently advanced technology is magic, it's that any technology taking place beyond the threshold of our senses is.

~Nick Harkaway

Never mind, never mind, let's get to the part where we smite the unrighteous. I've brought my most alarming teeth!
