The much-lauded parliamentary democracy in India has been unable to protect a genuine democratic set-up in Kashmir.

~Nyla Ali Khan

For Pakistan, Kashmir represents the infeasibility of secular nationalism and underscores the need for an Islamic theocracy in the subcontinent.

~Nyla Ali Khan

For India, Kashmir lends credibility to its secular nationalist image.

~Nyla Ali Khan

The increasing communalization of Indian politics is a juggernaut that annihilates the myth of secularism in India.

~Nyla Ali Khan

The rhetoric of hate and binarisms pervades the politics of the "Third-World" and of the West.

~Nyla Ali Khan

In establishment Indian and Pakistani thought, Kashmiris are defined as different from the nationals of the two countries.
