When you create something you leave little crumbs of stuff that you've experienced or music that you've listened to.

~Panda Bear

It's awkward, because sometimes you find new friends that are cooler than your old friends, and then your old friends desperately try to cling on to you even though you sort of hate them by now.

~Panda Bear

I have no interest in making music solely for a white audience. If that's what our audience is, I don't really feel responsible for that.

~Panda Bear

I have a hard time with extreme imagery. Like I can't watch horror movies or anything like that.

~Panda Bear

At least for me personally, drugs aren't an essential part of having a surreal experience, or what you might call a higher experience.

~Panda Bear

Drugs don't have to be a part of that to me, so if somebody says - your music takes me to that sort of place - then I'm really psyched.

~Panda Bear

I'm really into the idea of playing sit-down drums again. I don't know if it'll end up that way, but as of right now, that's what I'm interested in doing.

~Panda Bear

Even though there's stuff that I really like that is just a retro sort of style or whatever, I feel like what I'm most excited by is new mixes of things.

~Panda Bear

I feel like in a conversation if things get said and then repeated, it sort of becomes inherently part of the narrative whether you want it to be or not.

~Panda Bear

I always dreamed of going out to space. The idea of going to a planet where nobody's ever been is attractive to me, it just suits my nature.

~Panda Bear

I guess that's my defence, is like - even if people think it sucks - it's not me anymore, you know.

~Panda Bear

Doesn't every band sort of appropriate their influences into what they do? I guess that would be my defence: if you're making something, you kinda can't help being a conduit for other things.
