The greatest risk is really to take no risk at all. You've got to go out there, jump off the cliff, and take chances.

~Patrick Warburton

You never know what's going to happen with television these days.

~Patrick Warburton

I believe I'm doing the right thing in trying to step away from that and to take chances and work on little independent films and do stuff like that wild dance scene.

~Patrick Warburton

I'll work with Jerry Seinfeld any day of the week. Get a nice little paycheck there, but you do it for free. It's just good to be associated with that man. He's a great guy.

~Patrick Warburton

I don't know if I ever really considered making a connection with the audience.

~Patrick Warburton

Tick is a cartoon character, I don't know if you're familiar with him. This is the third step in his evolution. Comic book to cartoon to, now, live-action.

~Patrick Warburton

I have a family to support. And I'm not always going to be doing exactly what I want to do.

~Patrick Warburton

You don't make a fortune doing cartoons. It's a lot of fun, it keeps you busy, and it's better than a kick in the pants, absolutely. But doing voiceover work doesn't make you rich. It just doesn't.

~Patrick Warburton

There's not a fortune to be made doing voiceover work unless you're one of the main voices on "The Simpsons". See, there's "The Simpsons", and then there's everything else.

~Patrick Warburton

I love westerns. I've always wanted to do a western.

~Patrick Warburton

Apparently I work for free, look at some of the independent films I've done.

~Patrick Warburton

I always wanted to do a Disney movie.

~Patrick Warburton

There's just something about me and my persona that's a little bit bigger than life and ridiculous at times.

~Patrick Warburton

Fortunately work begets work.

~Patrick Warburton

Let an audience be able to find it themselves without spoonfeeding it.

~Patrick Warburton

So, deadpan I think just means not acknowledging for one second that you think that this is funny and clever.

~Patrick Warburton

My only job as an actor is to try and understand the character and, to the best of my ability, bring this character to life.
