Your voice dries up if you don't use it.

~Patti Page

I was a kid from Oklahoma who never wanted to be a singer, but was told I could sing. And things snowballed.

~Patti Page

Happiness, you'll find, is the greatest magnet in the world.

~Patti Page

Don't keep telling your parents they don't understand you. Believe me it's much worse when they do. There's just a chance, you know - they really might.

~Patti Page

Charm is simply the art of being pleasing.

~Patti Page

The best substitute for money is ingenuity.

~Patti Page

When there's friction in the house, the only answer is good manners.

~Patti Page

it follows that if you aren't happy with yourself, you won't be happy with others.

~Patti Page

people have a way of laughing at our deams until we make them come true.

~Patti Page

youth has everything - everything but experience and tolerance.

~Patti Page

What I like about singing is that, for me, it's a substitute for the psychiatrist's couch.

~Patti Page

I think you'll find, when you're married, that it isn't nearly so important for you to be interesting as it is to make your husband feel that he's interesting.

~Patti Page

I always thought that Elvis could have been a great actor, and that he was put in a lot of unimportant movies when he could have done a lot of great ones.

~Patti Page

On the radio I listen to the easy-listening stations, the jazz stations.

~Patti Page

Each song, you're telling a story and acting.

~Patti Page

Being able to sing all these years has helped me handle life's tragedies.

~Patti Page

I can tell it all in song: pathos, gladness, love, joy, unhappiness.

~Patti Page

The title of that great Christmas song was 'Boogie Woogie Santa Claus,' and no one ever heard of it.

~Patti Page

My music was called plastic, antiseptic, placid.

~Patti Page

A lot of the music, and especially rap, I don't understand.

~Patti Page

I'm sure there are a lot of things I should have done differently. But I don't think I've stepped on anyone along the way. If I have, I didn't mean to.
