I like to keep the world, to some degree, an implied setting.

~Paul S. Kemp

I enjoyed The Mirage by M. Ruff. I'm reading Edgar Rice Burrough's Princess Of Mars right and loving it.

~Paul S. Kemp

I loved The Weird (one of the stories in it inspired Blackalley in Discourse).

~Paul S. Kemp

Original work has no floor and no ceiling. You can reach essentially zero readers or millions.

~Paul S. Kemp

I try to pester Christian Dunn from time to time. As soon as my schedule allows, I plan to make a real pest of myself and get some hot, slippery Chaos action.

~Paul S. Kemp

The Disney deal created some wrinkles. I'm under contract. But I'm on standby.

~Paul S. Kemp

I'm unstuck in time. Also, I juggle like mad and have made myself efficient.

~Paul S. Kemp

Fantasy allows for less rigorous worldbuilding and more vigorous exploration of moral questions. Sci-fi is opp.

~Paul S. Kemp

My goal is to write stories that are connected, but not sequels in any meaningful sense. Like Howard's Conan tales or Leiber's Fahrrd & the Great Mauser stories.

~Paul S. Kemp

I always work from outline and almost always write out of sequence. It just works for me.

~Paul S. Kemp

With young kids (I have four including the newborn) times passes weirdly for me.

~Paul S. Kemp

[Writing] is harder than you think. You'll be rejected often. If you do it for money, you'll quit. Love it or don't do it.
