Men aren't actively writing women to oppress them, men are writing what they know. I say you can be much better as a woman for women's rights if you just go up there and write your own material.

~Rachel Bloom

If I could create my own utopia, it would be this genderless world where we didn't have to talk about it.

~Rachel Bloom

That quality is what makes women great collaborators; we understand it's a team effort. Even if it comes from society telling us to be polite.

~Rachel Bloom

There is so much more to me than my parts and what I wear, what my clothes are.

~Rachel Bloom

It feels like being a woman now gives you a slight advantage.

~Rachel Bloom

Women are very funny. Some of the funniest people I can think of are women.

~Rachel Bloom

If you let love solve everything for you, you have a lot of problems.

~Rachel Bloom

I was bullied a lot in middle school, and my bullies have since all apologized.

~Rachel Bloom

'YOU AREN'T TALENTED' - it cuts right to the fear of every artist.

~Rachel Bloom

When you're an only child, you get very used to pleasing the adults around you.

~Rachel Bloom

I love acting. I'm actually a very emotional actor.

~Rachel Bloom

I think I have learned to really get out of the mathematical side of myself that looks at story and story structure and go with, "Okay, well, what would people do in real life?"

~Rachel Bloom

Now women in comedy is a trendy topic, and people are hungering for women's voices in a way that they haven't before.

~Rachel Bloom

I'll tell you anything about myself. I will show you my bare butthole.

~Rachel Bloom

I loved musicals, love them still. But also, I'm really inspired by comedy music.

~Rachel Bloom

One of the ways that my show has been most successful is when it's dealing with women's issues, like Spanx and plucking and having heavy tits. That's why it feels like, creatively, an advantage.

~Rachel Bloom

As a young girl, if you do something funny - especially if you're Jewish - someone says, 'Oh, have you seen Gilda Radner?'
