The world was made up of people putting one foot in front of the other; and a life might appear ordinary simply because the person living it had been doing so for a long time.

~Rachel Joyce

You got up, and you did something. And if trying to find a way when you don't even know you can get there isn't a small miracle; then I don't know what is.

~Rachel Joyce

But maybe it's what the world needs. A little less sense, and a little more faith.

~Rachel Joyce

I've begun to think that we sit far more than we're supposed to...Why else would we have feet?

~Rachel Joyce

If we can't accept what we don't know, there really is no hope.

~Rachel Joyce

He understood that in walking to atone for the mistakes he had made, it was also his journey to accept the strangeness of others.

~Rachel Joyce

Harold could no longer pass a stranger without acknowledging the truth that everyone was the same, and also unique; and that this was the dilemma of being human.

~Rachel Joyce

The past was the past; there was no escaping your beginnings.

~Rachel Joyce

you could be ordinary and attempt something extraordinary, without being able to explain it in a logical way.

~Rachel Joyce

The least planned part of the journey, however, was the journey itself.

~Rachel Joyce

Beginnings could happen more than once, or in different ways.

~Rachel Joyce

...People would make the decisions they wished to make and some of them would hurt both themselves and those who loved them, and some would pass unnoticed, while others would bring joy.

~Rachel Joyce

If we don't go mad once in a while, there's no hope.

~Rachel Joyce

It was not a life, if lived without love.

~Rachel Joyce

After the two drinks, she felt warm inside, and slightly indistinct at the edges.

~Rachel Joyce

There is so much to the human mind we don't understand. But, you see, if you have faith, you can do anything.

~Rachel Joyce

And it can take a lifetime, a life of many years, to accept the incongruity of things: that a small moment can sit side by side with a big one, and become part of the same.

~Rachel Joyce

But it never ceases to amaze me how difficult the things that are supposed to be instinctive really are.
