Life is problems. Living is solving problems.

~Raymond E. Feist

I'm a huge fan of Cabernet and Bordeaux, and am passionate about Pinot Noir and Burgundies.

~Raymond E. Feist

There is no idea so brilliant or original that a sufficiently-untalented writer can't screw it up.

~Raymond E. Feist

A hero is someone who simply got too frightened to use his good sense and run away, then somehow lived through it all.

~Raymond E. Feist

But for the most part, love is a recognition, an opportunity to say, 'There is something about you I cherish.'

~Raymond E. Feist

Often I'll try things that just won't happen the way I'd like them to, so hearing that they're not working saves me some wear and tear the next time around.

~Raymond E. Feist

The issue of the Betrayal was so central to that, I felt the need to comment upon it. My choices were to ignore the games and put them 'outside' of continuity or to integrate them. I chose the latter.

~Raymond E. Feist

Never accept the proposition that just because a solution satisfies a problem, that it must be the only solution.

~Raymond E. Feist

Every person you encounter, whom you interact with, is there to teach you something. Sometimes it may be years before you realize what each had to show you.

~Raymond E. Feist

I know you'll think this odd, but I find it strangely exhilarating not knowing what's coming next.

~Raymond E. Feist

If I leave my computer, I'm probably not going to get back for hours. If I take a few minutes to answer questions and go web surfing, then guilt kicks in and I get back to work.

~Raymond E. Feist

One likes to think one grows as a writer as one ages, else all you get is an old young writer. Beyond that is the changing landscape of the universe and the stories I choose to tell.

~Raymond E. Feist

Neal had a couple of good ideas and they fit nicely, so that's the way I decided to go.

~Raymond E. Feist

Never underestimate the potential for human stupidity when wealth and power are at stake.

~Raymond E. Feist

The brave man is not the one without fear but the one who does what he must despite being afraid. To succeed, you must be willing to risk total failure; you must learn this.

~Raymond E. Feist

Sanity is all that stands between good and evil.

~Raymond E. Feist

Some loves come unbidden like winds from the sea, and others grow from the seeds of friendship.

~Raymond E. Feist

I don't write fantasy; I write historical novels about an imaginary place.

~Raymond E. Feist

The real secret of magic is that there is no magic.

~Raymond E. Feist

The world is much larger than I once dreamed, or perhaps my place in it is smaller than I once realized.

~Raymond E. Feist

The saddest part of a broken heart Isn't the ending so much as the start
The tragedy starts from the very first spark Losing your mind for the sake of your heart

~Raymond E. Feist

Altruism accrues little benefit to those lying cold in the gutter.

~Raymond E. Feist

Friends can betray you, but with an old enemy, you always know where you stand.

~Raymond E. Feist

Writing is hard work; its also the best job Ive ever had.

~Raymond E. Feist

You can't succeed unless you're willing to risk failure

~Raymond E. Feist

ATLANTA NIGHTS is sure to please the reader who enjoys this sort of thing.

~Raymond E. Feist

You can only have one first born child. You may love all your children deeply and with passion, but there is something unique about the first born.

~Raymond E. Feist

The first love is the difficult love.

~Raymond E. Feist

More men have been defeated by reports than all the steel of all the swords in history.

~Raymond E. Feist

You would do well to know, Marcus, that irritating a better swordsman than yourself is a good way to end up dead.

~Raymond E. Feist

Don't assume the world evolved in the order in which you discovered it.

~Raymond E. Feist

Old habits are hard to forget, and old fears are habits.

~Raymond E. Feist

Dolgan: 'Tis a wise thing to know what is wanted, and wiser still to know when 'tis achieved. Rhuagh: True. And still wiser to know when it is unachievable, for then striving is folly.

~Raymond E. Feist

If you're going to risk dying, there's no sense doing it wet, cold and hungry unless absolutely necessary.
