The church is in Christ, as Eve was in Adam.

~Richard Hooker

He that goeth about to persuade a multitude that they are not so well governed as they ought to be shall never want attentive and favorable hearers.

~Richard Hooker

See we not plainly that obedience of creatures unto the law of nature is the stay of the whole world?

~Richard Hooker

Angels are unsatisfiable in their longing to do by all means all manner of good unto all the creatures, ...especially the children of men.

~Richard Hooker

Whatsoever is good; the same is also approved of God.

~Richard Hooker

Even ministers of good things are like torches, a light to others, waste and destruction to themselves.

~Richard Hooker

The reason why the simpler sort are moved by authority is the consciousness of their own ignorance

~Richard Hooker

So that every man lawfully ordained must bring a bow which hath two strings, a title of present right and another to provide for future possibility or chance.

~Richard Hooker

Words must be taken according to the matter whereof they are uttered.

~Richard Hooker

Of two Evils we take the less.

~Richard Hooker

To live by one man's will becomes the cause of all misery.

~Richard Hooker
