O, there is lovely to feel a book, a good book, firm in the hand, for its fatness holds rich promise, and you are hot inside to think of good hours to come.

~Richard Llewellyn

There is no fence or hedge round time that has gone. You can go back and have what you like if you remember it well enough.

~Richard Llewellyn

Why is it, I wonder, that people suffer, when there is so little need, when an effort of will and some hard work would bring them from their misery into peace and contentment.

~Richard Llewellyn

I saw my father as a man, and not, as a man who was my father.

~Richard Llewellyn

You will only learn in a fight how much you've got to learn.

~Richard Llewellyn

Everywhere was singing, all over the house was singing, and outside the house was alive with singing, and the very air was song.

~Richard Llewellyn

How green was my valley then, and the valley of them that have gone.

~Richard Llewellyn

Strange that only a little problem of your own will take your mind far from a tragedy belonging to others.

~Richard Llewellyn

Let the Unions become engines for the working people to right their wrongs. Not benefit societies, or burial clubs. Let the Unions become civilian regiments to fight in the cause of the people.

~Richard Llewellyn

O, Voice of Man, organ of most lovely might.

~Richard Llewellyn

Glorious is the Voice of Man, and sweet is the music of the harp.

~Richard Llewellyn

A man will never know a woman until he knows her work.
