Most profoundly deaf people have speech that is very difficult to understand.

~Richard Masur

I moved out to L.A. in July and Hot L Baltimore started in September or October. So I had done a few things. I'd done a Mary [Tyler Moore]. I'd done a Waltons. I hadn't done a Rhoda yet I don't think.

~Richard Masur

I'm one of the handful of survivors of the guys I came up with.

~Richard Masur

I have to say I was very lucky in this [movie] business. I was in the right place at the right time when I first got started.

~Richard Masur

In a very real way Norman [Lear] godfathered me into my career. He was the best mentor anybody could have ever had.

~Richard Masur

I consider anybody who has been able to make a living in this business [movie business] without having to do something else for a living for any period of time let alone 43 years would be a miracle.

~Richard Masur

I did a film many years ago called The Man Without A Face. Gaby [Hoffmann] was in with Mel Gibson. That was his directing debut. He did a great job.

~Richard Masur

You have to give people the opportunity to prove themselves.

~Richard Masur

There is no relation to sound for deaf people. It is a totally different mental process.

~Richard Masur

I did my first movie, a movie called Whiffs, which very few people ever saw.

~Richard Masur

I had a very low voice for the character in the show. I said, "That's not actually my voice. That's the character's voice." I'm being such an actor.

~Richard Masur

She [Susan Lucci] was extraordinary. She wouldn't look at the scene until you walked in to rehearse it. It was amazing to me. That's the impression I got anyway.

~Richard Masur

If people don't actively knock the scenery over and they get the words out in something approximating the right order, you're moving on.
