One of the things I've always tried to do in filmmaking is that you don't tell the story, you try to show it.

~Rick Heinrichs

The advantages of a virtual production pipeline are that you can reduce the footprint of your production down to the size of the stage.

~Rick Heinrichs

The real tough thing is working with actors. I'm a designer and used to working with artists, so there is some familiarity with the personalities that come up, but actors are their own animal.

~Rick Heinrichs

I never feel like I'm the guy that's got all the answers.

~Rick Heinrichs

I love the interplay with other smart and creative people who have got better ideas than I do and that I can bring something to, as well.

~Rick Heinrichs

The fact that there are awards and exhibitions and some people know who I am is just all gravy. I'm lucky to just work in an industry where I get to play so much.

~Rick Heinrichs

My problem has been with purely digital films. I feel the danger there is that the kind of short-cuts you end up having to take are the ones that are most telling in the main characters.

~Rick Heinrichs

You want to feel appreciated, definitely. I think I've been very lucky to have a long enough career, so that I do get this kind of feedback.

~Rick Heinrichs

Even in traditional filmmaking, you're always trying to find novel ways of telling stories, and this is different.

~Rick Heinrichs

You gain wisdom and you don't make the same mistakes.
