A cat is only technically an animal, being divine.

~Robert Wilson Lynd

There is nothing in which the birds differ more from man than the way in which they can build and yet leave a landscape as it was before.

~Robert Wilson Lynd

It is almost impossible to remember how tragic a place the world is when one is playing golf.

~Robert Wilson Lynd

Most human beings are quite likable if you don't see too much of them.

~Robert Wilson Lynd

We forget that Socrates was famed for wisdom not because he was omniscient but because he realized at the age of seventy that he still knew nothing.

~Robert Wilson Lynd

In order to see birds it is necessary to become a part of the silence.

~Robert Wilson Lynd

We cannot get happiness by striving after it, and yet with an effort we can impart it.

~Robert Wilson Lynd

The belief in the possibility of a short decisive war appears to be one of the most ancient and dangerous of human illusions.

~Robert Wilson Lynd

The days on which one has been the most inquisitive are among the days on which one has been happiest.

~Robert Wilson Lynd

There are travelers who fear to own delicate hands more than to meet a lion, and soldiers who would rather lose a limb than gain a beautiful nose by artificial methods.

~Robert Wilson Lynd

A boy in love is not mainly a calf but a poet.

~Robert Wilson Lynd

It may be that all games are silly. But then, so are humans.

~Robert Wilson Lynd

No man is uninteresting when his hat is blown off and he has to scuttle after it down the street.

~Robert Wilson Lynd

Chekhov will seek out the key situation in the life of a cabman or a charwoman, and make them glow for a brief moment in the tender light of his sympathy.

~Robert Wilson Lynd

Mystery lies over the sea. Every ship is bound for Thule.

~Robert Wilson Lynd

It is the custom when praising a Russian writer to do so at the expense of all other Russian writers.

~Robert Wilson Lynd

This is woman's great benevolence, that she will become a martyr for beauty, so that the world may have pleasure.
