My wife could turn to me and she may say, 'Why do you love me?' And I can with all honesty look her in the eye and say, 'Because our pheromones matched our olfactory receptors.'

~Robin Ince

Homeopaths do not have a physical brain, but merely 'skull water' with the memory of brains.

~Robin Ince

If the Royal Variety Show was put in a matter transportation machine with the Royal Institution Christmas lectures, this is what you'd get.

~Robin Ince

I thought I better warn you that I am not one of those politically correct comedians, but it turns out that also I'm not really that racist, homophobic or woman hating either, so you might not notice

~Robin Ince

My life is constant revision but it's not revision, a lot of it is for the first time.

~Robin Ince

They gave 12 monkeys a typewriter for a week, and after a week, they only used it as a bathroom.

~Robin Ince

There can be a science to joke writing, there are certainly rules and patterns that can be followed, but I think most of the best comedy goes beyond the rules.

~Robin Ince

I have spent a reasonable percentage of my life in libraries - I like the hush.

~Robin Ince

I have a theory that evolutionary biologists are more vain than particle physicists.

~Robin Ince

We very quickly forget about the wonderful things we've got. People lose their excitement because there's too much. Basically we're experiencing nothing, because everything is available to us.

~Robin Ince

Life, to me personally, I believe it is a finite thing, my consciousness, and I want to use it as much as possible.

~Robin Ince

I'm glad the universe is pointless. It means if I get to the end of my life, the universe can't turn to me and go, 'What have you been doing, you idiot? That's not the point!

~Robin Ince

Wherever you are on Earth, there is more life present than in the rest of the known universe.

~Robin Ince

Science is very cross-generational; you're not just aiming it at twentysomethings, or eightysomethings. Every town's got a really broad selection of people and age groups interested in science.

~Robin Ince

I want to create shows which are interesting. I hope that some people are excited by some of the ideas.

~Robin Ince

You always need to find the balance in the science, but the balance to talking about evolutionary theory is not to talk about creationism, that's not a balance, that's misleading and it's just wrong.

~Robin Ince

Once you start looking at the world rationally, it becomes much more exciting.

~Robin Ince

To be paid, to be employed to be an enthusiast and be excited about existence is fantastic.

~Robin Ince

Not since Jimmy Carr have I seen a cold computer programme on stage generate so much laughter.

~Robin Ince

The worst, the most difficult thing I think is that the more you become intrigued by science and the information is out there, the more you are aware of the paucity of your own knowledge.

~Robin Ince

We as human beings like to be cocksure and certain.
