You don't even realize you're living in a before until you wake up one day and find yourself in an after.

~Robin Wasserman

Don't go looking in dark places, because dark things live there.

~Robin Wasserman

The Waking Dark is about what happens when something awakens a towns darkest impulses and unleashes them on the world.

~Robin Wasserman

I believed in happily ever after as much as anyone, because Jane Austen, Prince Charming, and Hugh Grant promised me it could happen. But maybe that particular delusion was universal.

~Robin Wasserman

But things don't just fall apart. People break them.

~Robin Wasserman

Not that my arms are getting tired or anything, but... how much longer is the hugging phase going to last?

~Robin Wasserman

Im not one of those authors who claims to hear voices in my head or let the characters speak through me, whatever that might mean.

~Robin Wasserman

The only thing more dangerous than a willingness to ignore the Law is an ability to change it.

~Robin Wasserman

Full Disclosure: I hate David with the passion of a thousand fiery suns all going to supernova at the same time

~Robin Wasserman

Nor did I need anyone's pity, but I would accept it with grace, because I have been well trained. Rudeness was a sign of weakness. Grace stemmed from power, the power to accept anything and move on.

~Robin Wasserman

A fundamentalist is someone who wants to substitute what he believes for what you believe," Max said. "And someone who thinks he knows the will of God better than anyone else.

~Robin Wasserman

In dreams you can become everything you're not. You can reverse the most fundamental truths of your life. You can taste death, the ultimate opposite.

~Robin Wasserman

I used to be an obsessive outliner - figuring that writing without an outline was like jumping off a cliff and building a parachute on the way down.

~Robin Wasserman

I should probably start with the blood.

~Robin Wasserman

Teen fiction should be about teenagers - no matter how many arguments there are about what YA lit should be, this seems like the one thing we can all agree on.
