I like Scottish people because they feel very true. They're always level and straight. They get a reputation for being hardened because of it, but I find them to be scrupulously honest people.

~Rupert Friend

I'm a terrible dancer.

~Rupert Friend

I think that what drives most of us as human beings is the want for something. You might have a hope, or a big dream, or a goal that you haven't yet achieved.

~Rupert Friend

Edinburgh is so cultural and such a beautiful place to walk around.

~Rupert Friend

The image of all the cars leaving pastel-colored people at the same time has never really left me as an anti-ambition for life!

~Rupert Friend

I really admire artists who take the time to recharge their batteries and not continually call on it. I think you can spot tired and jaded artists quite quickly.

~Rupert Friend

I don't think you can decide how famous or not you become.

~Rupert Friend

I don't really use the Internet or the newspapers to find out about people.

~Rupert Friend

I've never got a part in the same way twice. I've never prepared the same way. I've never experienced the filming the process the same way.

~Rupert Friend

I'll tell you, there's no goodies and baddies in the world, there's just people with intentions that sometimes clash.

~Rupert Friend

I really love living in cities where the people living above, below and next to you are from totally different worlds to you.

~Rupert Friend

I think saying you're bad at something is rather wonderful because then it doesn't matter anymore.

~Rupert Friend

I can only go places because I know that I can go away from them, if that makes sense. I like the gypsy lifestyle that filming affords.

~Rupert Friend

I think you can decide how much of yourself you're willing to make public.

~Rupert Friend

I don't think the idea of working in Hollywood really exists anymore. I think you work in films, and where the film is shot is where it's shot. The studio system doesn't really exist.

~Rupert Friend

I don't have a publicist. I don't go to events or self-promote, or endorse things, or whatever it is people are meant to do in that world.

~Rupert Friend

I'm only really interested in taking a part if it's nothing like me.

~Rupert Friend

It's great to sit and talk about the films and the people I work with, rather than where I buy my socks or whatever.

~Rupert Friend

Sport is not my thing.

~Rupert Friend

I believe that if you can discover something of the truth of a person, then you will start to understand, and to understand is to move towards, if not like, then at least an empathy of some kind.

~Rupert Friend

I think that the process of trying to become somebody else, and obviously the director/actor relationship in trying to do that, is such a weird, undefinable thing.

~Rupert Friend

I grew up in the countryside in the middle of nowhere in England and got out as soon as I could!

~Rupert Friend

I'm not intelligent enough to be a doctor, and kind of hands down you can't argue with the worth of that. But I don't really have an opinion about the worth of making art.

~Rupert Friend

Until civil rights are enjoyed by all of us, we're simply not civilized.
