No disease is more dangerous than a bad husband, for if a woman catches that Pox, she'll languish from it her entire life.

~Sabrina Jeffries

Sometimes the way to a man's heart is through his talleywacker.

~Sabrina Jeffries

You can never know too much about writing. If you think you know everything, you're not leaving yourself open to learn. . . . The best writers are always learning, exploring, and trying to improve.

~Sabrina Jeffries

It is better to be blind than to see things from only one point of view.

~Sabrina Jeffries

I can promise that even having an imperfect one who loves you is better than having none at all.

~Sabrina Jeffries

Advising Mrs. Harris was the least I could do," David said smoothly. "After all, she was the one who brought me and my late wife together.

~Sabrina Jeffries

Terence: As my old da used to tell me, 'never trust a rich man'. David: Good thing I'm only moderately rich. Terence: Which is why I only moderately distrust you.

~Sabrina Jeffries

A man is what he is and no fancy lodgings or fine clothes will change that (Daniel Brennan)

~Sabrina Jeffries

A teacher had once told them that men were either beasts, gentlemen, or beasts masquerading as gentlemen. Might there be a fourth category â€” gentlemen masquerading as beasts?

~Sabrina Jeffries

You got off on the wrong foot. I merely watched you shove it into your mouth.

~Sabrina Jeffries

Don't be silly. Loving is easy. It's finding someone to love you back that's hard.

~Sabrina Jeffries

What are you doing here?" she asked. "You forgot something when you left Halstead Hall," he said hoarsely. "What?" Her heart leapt into her throat as he strode purposefully toward her. "Me.

~Sabrina Jeffries

It's not your instincts that are the problem. It's your tendency to drown them in a bottle.

~Sabrina Jeffries

If you never put your life in someone else's hands, then you can't really expect them to put theirs in yours. In the long run, never trusting anyone is a hard way to live.

~Sabrina Jeffries

The man is always the last to know when Cupid has struck him
-Anonymous, Memoirs of a Mistress

~Sabrina Jeffries

No one in life can ever match fiction

~Sabrina Jeffries

Angel? Angels didn't sit on the lap of wicked scoundrels-not unless they were the fallen kind.

~Sabrina Jeffries

And in my private life I prefer not to pass myself off as what I'm not (Daniel Brennan)
