What am I doing in this silly showbiz life? I do wonder that sometimes.

~Saffron Burrows

Location work has its charms, and can seem glamorous on the outside, but I think living at home and having the stability of a home life once you've finished work is very underrated!

~Saffron Burrows

I'll always take Scrabble and chess if I'm going filming. But I do have the Scrabble dictionary, which can be infuriating for other players.

~Saffron Burrows

I like working on stage because there's something very immediate about it, that interaction with an audience where you immediately hear their reaction, or feel them, whether they're with you.

~Saffron Burrows

I like being in love, but loving is what is crucial to me. Loving is the reason to live.

~Saffron Burrows

My parents were political, so it's definitely in my bones. Wherever I am, I always seem to get involved with politics. I think, once it's in your bloodstream, it's always there. I love it.

~Saffron Burrows

I've always been a strong feminist and felt that the image of models was detrimental to women. That whole thing really bothered me. I would think about quitting about once a week.

~Saffron Burrows

I had a happier experience of the city as an actress than I had had as a model.

~Saffron Burrows

You can't ignore the system and the power you acquire as an actor if you're in films that are successful.

~Saffron Burrows

I do get funny people sometimes coming up to me in supermarkets in America with my picture in their pocket, which is a bit strange.

~Saffron Burrows

I grew up in a strongly socialist family. While I was at school, I worked in party politics and with organizations like the Anti-Nazi League. Everywhere I saw it, I fought prejudice.

~Saffron Burrows

Part of me misses the days when we have four channels in England and we were all talking about everything all the time.

~Saffron Burrows

I don't always want a big meal after work - just some crisps and wine!

~Saffron Burrows

It helps being from somewhere other than Hollywood, not having grown up with that sense of film-making. I really wasn't exposed to that as a young woman.

~Saffron Burrows

When I was a child I wanted to be a petrol pump attendant. I suppose you have all sorts of thoughts as a child and at the time I figured that it was a way to avoid doing anything like going on stage.

~Saffron Burrows

When I was little it was a great time for film-making, with stuff like Mike Nichols' 'Silkwood.' The films you see in that pre-secondary-school stage stay with you in a very particular way.

~Saffron Burrows

When your life is as precious as all our lives are, then it needs to be kept precious and looked after and treated well. And that is not something we should be sharing with a wider audience.

~Saffron Burrows

I like acting in London-not least because it means I can go home after the show every day, rather than being on location making a film.

~Saffron Burrows

I'm not very good with stills. I get all twitchy.

~Saffron Burrows

I think politics can no longer be assigned to parliamentary activity and it probably never could be. But politics with a small p and the history of trade union movement really interests me.

~Saffron Burrows

It's always a help when you have worked with someone as you've got to know them a bit already.

~Saffron Burrows

Having spent a number of my younger years with trade-union parents attending NUT annual conferences, I feel comfortable with an agenda in my hand and a procedural format for debate.
